Strong in the Rain: Surviving Japan's Earthquake, Tsunami and Fukushima Nuclear Disaster was not exactly what I was expecting. Before visiting Japan for the first time last year, I read Richard Lloyd Parry's Ghosts of the Tsunami. Parry, like his American counterparts, was (and still is) an (English) journalist based in Japan.

Trampolines were blown about during strong winds when Hurricane Delta made landfall near Lafayette, Louisiana, on October 9. Robby Ancelet's home security cameras recorded his trampoline being blown away and a neighbour's trampoline rolling into his yard during the powerful winds. Well, after surviving many other hurricanes. Our trampoline in the first video went flying ...
